

An Explanation of the Permission to Publish

In order for the Canadian Nautical Research Society (CNRS) to publish your contribution, “[title of the article]” in The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord, (the journal), you must grant permission for publication. In this letter I try to provide context to the terms as set out in the permission to publish agreement below. In broad terms, the permission to publish does four things.

1. It allows CNRS to print and distribute your article through publication in its paper journal.
2. It allows CNRS to publish your article electronically, both on its own website, and by agreement with EBSCO on a third-party commercial database.
3. It provides CNRS with a warranty that all necessary permissions for the use of material, illustrations or other graphics have been obtained by you and you understand the copyright implications for any said use.
4. While the CNRS retains copyright over publication of your contribution as copy edited for the journal, subsequent use of material, in whole or in part, is allowed in future if suitable acknowledgment is given that the contribution was first published in The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord.

In considering this permission to publish, you may find it useful to know that:

- a) Canada is a contracting party to the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary and Artistic Works which sets the broad framework for national law; each country has its own legal interpretation of the obligations and rights attached to copyright, and generally has legislation by way of statute which gives greater detail;
- b) as The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord is published in Canada, Canadian copyright law applies;
- c) in accordance with Canadian law, the journal is deposited with the Library and Archives Canada in Ottawa; and
- d) the Supreme Court of Canada has provided six criteria for establishing fair dealing (known as fair use in the United States) which may in part address your needs or concerns for obtaining permission to quote or otherwise to use someone else’s material.

Further information about the Copyright Act of Canada can be found on the internet at relevant federal Government of Canada websites such as the Department of Justice and Library and Archives Canada as well as less official ones giving some explanation of Canadian copyright law and fair dealing. Familiarity with the issue and compliance are the responsibility of authors. Contributors who are not Canadian nationals or resident in Canada may wish to review the Supreme Court of Canada’s ruling with respect to fair dealing (similar but not the same as fair use in the United States) and the criteria which it outlined. For a discussion of the common practices and complexities within the context of American national law, The Chicago Manual of Style provides a comprehensive discussion. The Library of Congress website is also a good source for the practical interpretation of copyright for the use of particular materials such as photographs.

Please read the Permission to Publish form below, and then send a reply email indicating that you grant permission to publish in accordance with these conditions. We will be unable to proceed further with your article until we receive that permission.

Permission to Publish

The Canadian Nautical Research Society (the “Society”) is pleased to undertake the publication of your contribution to The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord, entitled “[title of the article]” (the “Contribution”). We ask you to assign the copyright, thus granting us all rights for the Contribution, so that you as author and we as sponsor of The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord maybe protected from the consequences of unauthorized use. Following publication in the journal, the Society will give permission, conditional on attribution of its first publication by the journal being acknowledged, for you to reprint the Contribution without charge in any book of which you are the author or editor, or to include it in any collection edited or produced by a third party .

Accordingly, the following terms of publication are submitted for your consideration.

Copyright Assignment: Whereas The Canadian Nautical Research Society is undertaking to publish the Contribution in its journal, The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord, and whereas you desire to have the Contribution so published, now therefore you grant and assign the entire copyright for the Contribution as copy edited for the journal to the Society for its exclusive use. The copyright consists of any and all rights of whatever kind or nature now or hereafter protected by the copyright laws of Canada, the United States and of all foreign countries, in all languages and forms of communication, and the Society shall be the sole proprietor thereof. The Society in turn grants to you the right to reprint the Contribution in any book of which you are the author or editor, subject to your giving proper credit in the book to the original publication of the Contribution in The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord. The Society will give permission for your contribution to be included in any collection prepared by a third party. To protect the copyright in the Contribution, the original copyright notice as it appears in The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord must be included in the credit.

Warranty: You warrant that the Contribution is original with you; that it contains no matter which is defamatory or is otherwise unlawful or which invades individual privacy or infringes any proprietary right or any statutory copyright; and you agree to indemnify and hold the Society harmless against any claim to the contrary. Further, you warrant that you have the right to assign the copyright to the Society and that no portion of the copyright to the Contribution has been assigned previously. It is understood that the copyright to the Contribution has not been registered or deposited with any national library or registry, but that in the event such registration has taken place you will promptly transfer the copyright to the Society.

Previous Publication and Permission: You warrant that the Contribution has not been published elsewhere in whole or in part (except as may be set out in a rider annexed hereto and signed by the Society) and that no agreement to publish is outstanding. Should the Contribution contain material that requires written permission for inclusion in the Contribution (including but not limited to photographs, other illustrations, or copyrighted text that exceeds standards of “fair dealing”), such permission shall be obtained at your own expense from the copyright proprietor. Further, you attest that you have received the necessary permissions as may be required for the publication of any illustrations or other graphic material that have been supplied or owned by you. Incases where such material is clearly in the public domain, permissions are not be required.

It is the responsibility of authors to establish whether copyright is current or expired.

Copyright permissions for use: By agreeing to permit publication of your contribution, you are attesting that you have secured all the necessary written permissions for citations of written materials, such as the use of archival, interview, or privately held materials, as well as for lengthy quotations (300 words or more from a single text) for sources still in copyright and can supply evidence of such by way of written permission to the editors and society if needed.

Subsidiary Rights and Compensation: It is understood that you will receive no monetary compensation from the Society for the assignment of copyright and publication of the Contribution in The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord.

Electronic Publication: You are advised that it is current practice of the Canadian Nautical Research Society to post an electronic version of the journal on its website two years after publication. Further, the Society maintains an agreement with EBSCO that permits that corporate entity to put content from The Northern mariner/Le marin du nord on their proprietorial commercial databases. Articles and bookreviews are abstracted, and in many cases the full text is also made available. By signing this form you assign copyright to the Society for that purpose without reservation or limitation. You further acknowledge that in future the Society may without notification amend or otherwise change this current practice to reflect changing technologies or circumstances as well as enter into any agreement with a third party to make The Northern Mariner/Le marin du nord available to a broader readership.

If the foregoing terms are satisfactory, please indicate the same by responding to this email with the statement that you accept the conditions of this Permission to Publish form, and that such permission for your contribution is given.
